

THE OREGON GOLF ENTHUSIAST

FOR EXAMPLE, THE MAN WHO GAVE BIRTH, AND NOT ONLY DID HE GIVE BIRTH BUT OF ALL THINGS TO A GOLF COURSE AND NOT ONLY DID HE NOT ONLY GIVE BIRTH BUT OF ALL THINGS TO A GOLF COURSE, BUT TO THE FINEST GOLF COURSE IN THE WHOLE ENTIRE WORLD—THE OTHER 204 GOLF COURSES IN OREGON TYING FOR A CLOSE 2ND.

In the beginning there was golf. In Scotland. Some men were dropped off outside a harbor near St. Andrews and started hitting small pebbles with sticks into little vermin holes on their walk into town. Over the years, the game spread east and west. Pebbles were replaced by small, dimpled balls. Sticks by five-hundred-dollar titanium clubs. Vermin holes by multimillion-dollar man-made fairways. But then came the man who remembered what golf was meant to be and created a true links course he named Bandon Dunes after its mother, Bandon, Oregon, on the Pacific Coast. A walking course but with sturdy caddies who don't mind a little weather if some should come their way. Where you play the land rather than a course. A course which begs the question, is it golf the way it should be or golf the way it could be? And if you don't believe it, come see for yourself, as the man who created the finest golf course in the whole entire world also made it open to the public.

Come play the land at Bandon Dunes or at any of the other 170 unique public courses in Oregon, but first go to traveloregon.com or call 1-800-547-7842.
